Fleming Assails FBI 'Dirty Tricks'

By John O'Connor

NEWS WASHINGTON BUREAU

And Robert Cummins

HIGHER EDUCATION REPORTER

University of Michigan President Robben W. Fleming said today he was not surprised at revelations of FBI "dirty tricks" on campus in the late 1960s.

Documents detailing how the FBI sent anonymous letters to state legislators and U-M regents as part of its counterintelligence campaign to disrupt the so-called "New Left" and later claimed to have caused three teachers to be dropped from the U-M faculty were released this week in Washington under the Freedom of Information Act.

The documents are a part of 53,000 pages of heavily censored files pertaining to the operations of the FBI's "Cointelpro" (counterintelligence program). Cointelpro was a 15-year FBI secret project aimed at disrupting groups thought to be subversive. It was discontinued in 1971.

The FBI used similar tactics such as anonymous letters to disrupt the Communist Party and the Ku Klux Klan in the Detroit area. And the FBI always took care to insure the letters couldn't be traced back to the "Bureau."

Beginning in June, 1968, the FBI office in Detroit sent a lengthy memorandum to Washington headquarters assessing the strength of new left groups such as SDS on the campuses of U-M, Michigan State University, Wayne State University, Western Michigan University and Eastern Michigan University.

The FBI analysts rated the universities in just that order in terms of "New Left" influence. Western was deemed to have experienced "no real confrontation to date with the new left." Eastern and MSU were thought to be under the control of "nonsense presidents in Harold Sponberg and John A. Hannah, and Wayne State was thought to be ready to take a "strong position" against student disruption.

The U-M however clearly worried the FBI, which considered it operated by a "new, weak president, Dr. Robin Fleming."

"This (U-M) administration has demonstrated itself in past student confrontations of disruption as adverse to having any show-down with agitators," the FBI said.

The Detroit FBI recommended pressure be brought to bear on the U-M through alumni groups, the U-M Board of Regents and state legislators.

The Detroit Bureau said the university was most vulnerable to threats against its financial support from legislators, and alumni or financial sponsors of university research.

Detroit FBI recommended a mailing list of regents, state legislators and important alumni be drawn up to receive anonymous, FBI-authored letters complaining about the permissiveness of the U-M administration.

"The worst part of it," said Fleming, "is the revelation of how poor the FBI's judgments were."

"It is apparent in retrospect," said Fleming, "that they took the threat of the radical students as being much stronger than it actually was."

The problem was not the relatively small radical faction, but rather keeping the much larger group which tended to be alienated for other but not radical reasons from throwing in their lot with the radical groups.

"The question is, do you try to meet them with force?"

"You don't, but rather try to roll with the punch and maintain the things that are important to you. You accept a certain amount of indignity in order to avoid the kind of thing that happened at Kent State."

Regarding the FBI's claim of being responsible for denying tenure to two faculty members and creating pressure which caused another to leave, Fleming said, "I doubt that there was any tenure case when the issue was the faculty member's political beliefs."

Fleming said anonymous letter carry little weight with the U-M administration. "Some people don't even read them," he observed.

Commenting on an FBI report of the period that he was "a new, weak president," Fleming said, "I never bothered to defend myself on those counts. It is up to the people to judge."

The FBI field office requested that Washington permit agents to give a retired U-M scientist information on several faculty members whom the FBI considered active leftists in order that the information could be passed on to a member of the board of regents. The names of all these individuals have been censored from the files.

The FBI director approved these initiatives by the Detroit agents. And, noting the SDS was going to convene at MSU, the FBI director told Detroit to be alert to take advantage of all possible disruptive activities and instructed: "An imaginative, enthusiastic approach is imperative."

After the June SDS meeting at MSU, the FBI sought to try to get a scheduled August meeting of radicals at U-M cancelled by mailing an anonymous letter to the regents, to then Ann Arbor News editor, Arthur P. Gallagher, Sen. John T. Bowman, D-Roseville, and Rep. Harold B. Clark, D-Warren. The letter complained about the use of public facilities by radicals dedicated to the "overturn of the existing system."

Again, FBI headquarters approved the anonymous mailing and repeated its instructions to insure the letter couldn't be traced back to the FBI.

In September, 1968, the FBI in Detroit asked Washington for permission to send anonymous letters critical of the permissiveness of the U-M administration and aimed at discrediting certain faculty members and two "Reverends" whose names have all been censored out of the memo made public. Again, the letter went to the same groups of people whom the FBI termed so-called "opinion molders."

The letter was critical of four faculty members for their left-wing activities and said at one point: "Don't let them use your own gun to shoot you down," and "let them shout but don't furnish them with the microphone."

Within a month, FBI headquarters agreed the Detroit office's proposal "has merit," but thought the eight-page anonymous letter proposed was too long and suggested that it be broken into "several installments."

By Oct. 31, 1968, the Detroit FBI filed a report on its Cointelpro success to date, noting the continuing plans to discredit U-M faculty members with leftist leanings.

Under the heading "tangible results," the FBI field office claimed its earlier anonymous letter to the regents and state legislators appeared to be causing them to put pressure on Fleming to get tougher with radical students.

By February, 1969, the FBI in Detroit reported to Washington its plans to discredit certain U-M faculty members was progressing, and said that U-M administrators had commenced giving "lip service" to demands for more controls on student radicals.

During this same time period, the FBI sent an anonymous letter to advertisers critical of the MSU student newspaper, "State News" for running a news story using "vulgar" language.

In September, 1969, Detroit FBI informed Washington that its Cointelpro efforts against certain U-M faculty members was apparently paying off because two of the teachers were "dropped" from the faculty, and a third left because he felt pressured.

The last letter regarding the U-M affair is dated Feb. 24, 1970, and is from the Special FBI Agent in Charge at Detroit to the FBI director and said in part: "Bureau was previously advised that several young faculty members who were aggressively involved with leadership to the New Left at the U-M were not given tenure with the U-M faculty and have secured employment elsewhere."

"Additionally, it is noted that after widespread SDS disruptive activities at the U-M (in) January and February, 1970, the U-M president has announced his intention to place local criminal charges against some SDS members and to attempt to have the SDS organization thrown off campus."

"Reliable confidential source close to the U-M administration has advised that, in part, the U-M president's action was brought about by the fact that he was contacted personally by every member of the Board of Regents who reportedly counselled him to react vigorously to this current round of New Left disruption."
